Are you in Good Hands?

How can I protect myself from identity theft?

Identity theft is nothing new, but the "digital age" has made it easier than ever to gather, organize, and transmit large amounts of information—including the credit card numbers, Social Security numbers, and account information that identity thieves need to do their dirty work.

Don't give identity thieves a chance. There's a lot you can do to protect your personal information:

Shred documents with personal information, shred credit card offers and other offers that a thief could make use of.

Protect your Social Security number. Don't carry your Social Security card with you, in case your wallet gets stolen, and don't write it on your checks.

Only give out personal information if you know the person or group you're dealing with and you initiated the contact—whether by phone, mail, or Internet.

Make your passwords hard to guess

No matter how careful you are, there is always some risk of identity theft. Keep an eye on your accounts so you can spot suspicious activity right away. Contact your insurance agent to talk about options of adding coverage for possible identity theft.
